HR Policy Awards Badges of Excellence to PandoLogic

HR Policy Association’s Recruiting Software Initiative Review Board Identifies Innovators in the Field of Human Resources Automation and Software Solutions

Washington, D.C. – HR Policy Association, representing nearly 400 Chief Human Resource Officers from the largest corporations in the United States and globally, is pleased to announce that its Recruiting Software Initiative (RSI) has awarded Badges of Excellence to PandoLogic for Adaptability and Returns.

The RSI Review Board was impressed with PandoLogic’s demonstrated AI-enabled programmatic job advertising solution for corporations. With over 10 years of service in this space, PandoLogic automates the job advertising process to reduce cost, increase impressions and applicants per requisition, and connect open jobs with unique and engaged markets. While much of the application is automated, PandoLogic works closely with clients to identify the root cause of underperforming requisitions.

The RSI Review Board has awarded Badges of Excellence to PandoLogic for Adaptability and Returns.

The RSI Review Board is comprised of talent acquisition leaders from nearly 20 HR Policy Association member companies and aims to identify companies whose innovative products and services deserve consideration by Chief Human Resource Officers of large corporations.

Badges of Excellence are awarded to solutions assessed by the RSI Review Board that were able to demonstrate innovative approaches to improving an employer’s ability to identify, attract, evaluate, and retain critically important talent. The RSI Review Board does not promote any one software solution over another. Instead, it assesses each solution through distinct lenses related to the application’s ability to adapt, mitigate unconscious bias, comply with labor regulations, exhibit successful integrations, justify outcomes, and demonstrate returns directly correlated to the vendor’s platform.
